

COACHING FEEDBACK - ALEX (ALI)

Calls from 2026-04-23 | Contractor Growth LLC

HOW TO READ THIS

This is feedback from your 2 calls today. Both were transcribed and scored against our Setter and Closing Script.

Here's the honest headline: you're already operating at a higher level than most of your teammates. Your Call 2 with Cody (Magic Touch) was solid - Alice opener, clean pitch, textbook objection handle on the "leads shared with 5-10 companies" pushback, ROI math with real proof points, owner reveal at the end. You booked the meeting.

But there's a gap between "good call" and "closed deal" - and that gap is where the money is. This doc is about that last 20%.

Read this before Monday's 6pm meeting with Cody. That's your biggest open deal and the skills below determine whether it closes.

PART 1: TODAY'S NUMBERS

Calls reviewed: 2

Meeting

Call 1 - 4/50 - 4 min, waterproofing contractor, ambiguous reschedule (no confirmed time), walked to receive cement

Call 2

Context: 26/50 is "targeted coaching" territory. You're not in critical coaching range (Jowanna is at 13.4 avg). You're past fundamentals - you're polishing.

PART 2: WHAT YOU DID RIGHT TODAY (KEEP DOING THIS)

Not flattery - this is the playbook you already have. Don't lose it.

1. ALICE OPENER - consistent on both calls. "My assistant Alice sent you over a text about paper jobs earlier today." That one sentence puts you in the owner frame from the jump. Most reps skip it. You don't.

2. CLEAN 30-SECOND PITCH - Call 2 hit every beat: pay on results, no monthly subscription, app with name/address, long-term partnership. Natural delivery, not robotic.

3. OBJECTION HANDLE THAT ACTUALLY WORKED - Cody asked the shared-leads objection. You named NGS specifically (gave him a moment to confirm), validated the pain, then reframed with logic: "we have a locked in exclusive deal... if you go to someone's house and they tell you we have another appointment at five and seven, why would you work with us?" That's parrot -> confirm -> logical reframe -> question-close, executed live. Great work.

4. ROI MATH WITH PROOF POINTS - when Cody asked about close rates, you dropped real numbers: "worst is 30%, best is 90%, biggest package client breaking $3 million." Then the close math: "30% pays you back five times what you spent." This is Matt Ryder textbook and you did it unprompted.

- 5. OWNER REVEAL AT END - "by the way, I am the owner of the company." Exactly where the script puts it. You reframed the whole call in one sentence.
 - 6. MEETING BOOKED WITH REAL LOGISTICS - got the time, got the email, saved contact, confirmed Google Meet. You don't leave prospects in limbo like "I'll send you info" - you lock calendars.
- These five things are already better than 80% of setters out there. Protect them.

PART 3: THE 3 THINGS THAT COST YOU REVENUE TODAY

Ranked by revenue impact, not ease of fix. Fix these in order.

#1 - YOU'RE PITCHING PRICING THAT ISN'T OUR CURRENT OFFER

This is the biggest one and it's a training problem, not a skill problem.

On Call 2 you said:

"For $1

Our canonical pricing is:

$1,000

That's it. No packages of 15 appointments. No $12k tier. No per-appointment discount at scale.

Why this matters: Cody walked away thinking he gets 15 appointments for $1,000 + $150 each (which is ~$3,250 upfront?). Or that if he goes big, he unlocks a $33/appointment rate. When Monday's meeting happens and you give him the real numbers, he'll either feel misled, renegotiate, or walk. Either way: trust is already cracked before you've even pitched.

What to do right now:

1. Befo
through

Clean single number first. No stacking. No packages.

#2 - YOU MISSED THE 20-MINUTE ASK WHEN THE PROSPECT WAS HOT

Call 2, line by line, Cody gave you buying signals:

- "I'll go

That's not a "let me think about it" - that's a warm prospect ready to be closed. You scheduled him 4 days out (Monday).

4 days is a LOT of time for:

- Cody

What the script says: ask the 20-minute ask before you settle for a later meeting.

"Cody, based on what you're telling me, I'm confident we can help. Do you have about 20 minutes right now? I can run you through exactly what we'd do in your area and if it makes sense, we can actually get you set up today. Otherwise Monday works."

You give the prospect the option. Hot prospects take it. Lukewarm ones go to Monday. You lose zero deals by asking - and you catch the same-day closes you'd otherwise lose.

For Cody specifically: Monday still matters, but going forward, EVERY call gets the 20-min ask before you fall back to scheduling.

#3 - YOU BROKE CHARACTER ON CALL 1 (REAL NAME REVEAL)

Call 1, the waterproofing guy asked your name. You said:

"Alex F

Per the script, Alex Pierce is who you are on calls. That's the owner frame. When you reveal you have a "work name," the prospect starts wondering what else is fake. Trust cracks quietly - you might not feel it in the moment, but it kills close rate over time.

What to say instead if someone asks:

- "Alex

This isn't about being dishonest - every business has customer-facing aliases. It's about protecting the frame the whole pitch depends on.

PART 4: THE CALL 1 POSTMORTEM (HOW TO HANDLE DISTRACTED PROSPECTS)

Call 1 wasn't really a sales call - it was a prospect monologue with a sales call hiding inside. The contractor rambled about Anwar Sadat, "you love me so much," his dad's book, Egyptian peace treaties. You got dragged along.

Two options for handling this kind of call:

OPTION A - Redirect firmly and keep the call alive

"Hey lo on with

OPTION B - Cut cleanly when it's clearly not a real prospect

"Sound
uninter

What you did was Option C - drift with the prospect and try to reschedule ambiguously. That's the only option that doesn't work.

Rule for next time: if a prospect goes off-topic for more than 30 seconds, pick A or B explicitly. Don't drift.

PART 5: DAILY CHECKLIST

BEFORE every call:

- Prosp

DURING every call:

1. Ope
Pierce,

AFTER every call:

- Log o
empty

PART 6: YOUR WEEK PLAN

Monday 6pm - Cody @ Magic Touch (hardscape) meeting

This is the priority. Before Monday:

- Send

Tuesday-Friday

- On every call: 20-minute ask is mandatory

- Use c

- 30 min: re-read the Setter/Closing Script and this doc

- Option
you ran

TARGET FOR NEXT WEEK

Monday: close Cody, or at minimum walk out with another meeting <48 hrs and a payment ask in place.

Week g

You're already past the fundamentals. Now it's about discipline - using the same frame on every call, not just the ones where the prospect cooperates.
