

COACHING FEEDBACK - JOWANNA

Calls from 2026-04-23 | Contractor Growth LLC

HOW TO READ THIS

Feedback from your 5 calls today. Every call was transcribed and scored against our Setter and Closing Script.

Goal: give you the exact tools so next week you're closing 1-2 deals instead of 0.

Good news: your pitch CONTENT is right. You know the system - demand capture, SEO, lead qualification, pillars, all of it. Your delivery and objection handling are what need work. Both are fixable in a week or two.

Read this whole doc before your next shift. Keep Part 2 (the handles) open during every call.

PART 1: TODAY'S NUMBERS

Calls reviewed: 5

Closes

Call 1 - 6/50, 5 min, no book

Call 2

Your best call was 5 - you actually used the frame. Proves you CAN do this. The gap is consistency and handling objections.

PART 2: THE 4 OBJECTIONS THAT KILLED EVERY DEAL

Every call died at an objection - not at the opener, not at the pitch. Fix these four and your close rate jumps immediately.

Every handle follows the same framework:

PARR

OBJECTION 1: "WHAT IF I DON'T CLOSE THE DEAL?"

Where it came up: Call 5.

What you said:

What you SHOULD have said:

1. PARROT + CLARIFY: "Totally - when you say 'what if I don't close,' help me understand: what's your current close rate when you meet with a qualified prospect?"

(Listen

2. GUARD DROP: "Yeah, got it. Don't even worry about it - most people ask this, it's the right question."

3. ISOLATE: "Apart from the 'what if I don't close' piece, is there anything else stopping us?"

4. HANDLE WITH MATH: "Let's do the math. You close around [40%] of qualified prospects. For every 10 leads, you close 4. At $150 per lead, you spend $1,500 to close 4 jobs. What's your average job size? [$15,000]. That's $60,000 revenue from $1,500 spend. Even if you had a terrible week and closed 1 of 10, that's $15,000 from $1,500. How's the math looking?"

5. QUESTION-CLOSE: "With all of that in mind, what do you think is the most intelligent decision from here?"

WHY THIS WORKS: You're not arguing with their fear - you're walking them into a math problem they can't dismiss (because it's THEIR numbers). Once they see the math, the objection disappears.

WHAT NOT TO SAY:

- "Don't

OBJECTION 2: "CAN WE JUST TRY ONE JOB FIRST?"

Where it came up: Call 3 (the closeable Bay Area concrete contractor).

What the prospect said:

"Can w eventu

Why you missed this: This is a BUYING SIGNAL, not an objection. When he said "you got to make money and I got to make money" - that's someone talking themselves INTO a deal. You had to close right there. Instead you restated the $44/day and he walked.

What you SHOULD have said (once our "1 free appointment with setup" offer is live):

"I love
your fir on the

That's assumptive close + risk reversal + same-day urgency all in one.

What you SHOULD have said (without the new offer yet):

1. PARROT: "Try one job first - gotcha. When you say 'one job,' what does that look like? Paying only if you close it, or something else?"

2. GUARD DROP: "Don't even worry about it. Most serious operators ask for some version of this."

3. ISOLATE: "If we lowered your risk on the first one, is there anything else stopping us?"

4. HANDLE WITH REFRAME: "Here's the thing - we're already doing that. The $150 lead fee only happens when we've qualified the lead and booked the appointment. You're not paying for a 'maybe.' You're paying for a qualified prospect showing up. The setup fee gets the whole acquisition system running - first month of ads, qualification system, SEO. Without that, there's nothing to 'try.' But here's what my best clients do: they treat the first 10 appointments as the sample. If 4 close, we're good. If fewer than 2 close, we're doing something wrong and I fix it personally. Fair?"

5. QUESTION-CLOSE: "With all of that in mind, what's the most intelligent decision from here?"

WHY IT WORKS: You reframe "try one job" as "try the first 10 appointments" - flip THEIR frame into YOURS. "I fix it personally" builds trust without reducing authority.

OBJECTION 3: "I WANT % OF SIGNED CONTRACT - NO AD SPEND, NO SETUP"

Where it came up: Call 4 (Alex - your BEST opportunity of the day).

What the prospect said:

What you said (the WORST moment of your day):

Why this killed the deal: You admitted you're not the decision-maker. Per the script, YOU ARE THE OWNER. The moment you said "talk to my partners," the prospect stopped treating you as the authority. Every closing line after that was dead.

NEVER SAY "I'LL TALK TO MY PARTNERS" in front of a prospect. Ever. If you actually need to check with Noah, reframe as "let me run your specific numbers tonight and come back tomorrow with something tailored." Never break the owner frame.

What you SHOULD have said:

1. PARROT: "You want commission only - 2-2.5% of signed contracts. Got it. Why that specifically? Have you done that with other vendors?"

2. GUARD DROP: "I actually get it - it sounds fairer on the surface."

3. ISOLATE: "If I could show you why the flat model protects YOU better, is there anything else stopping us?"

4. HANDLE WITH THE MATH REFRAME:

With flat $150 per qualified booked appointment, it doesn't matter if the job is $30k or $300k - your cost of acquisition is the same tiny percentage either way. On a $300k job, $150 is 0.05%. That's insane value for you.

We're not optimizing for your average job - we're optimizing for your biggest jobs, because that's where your margin is. Does that make sense?"

5. QUESTION-CLOSE: "If the math works - and I think you can see it does - what's the most intelligent decision from here?"

WHY IT WORKS: You flipped the objection. He thinks commission is fairer - you proved it actually robs him on his highest-margin work. You argued his economic interest, not your model.

OBJECTION 4: "I'VE BEEN BURNED BEFORE"

Where it came up: Call 2 AND Call 4. The most common objection of the day - which means this handle alone will change a lot of calls.

What prospects said:

What you said:

Why this failed: When someone has been burned, they need to feel HEARD before they can buy. Jumping to differentiation feels like you're dismissing their pain. They tune out.

What you SHOULD have said (Matt Ryder's reframe - this is the most powerful move):

1. STOP AND REFRAME WITH RESPECT:

2. ISOLATE + GET THE REAL STORY: "Walk me through what happened. What specifically didn't work?"

3. GUARD DROP: "Yeah, got it. That's frustrating - makes sense why you'd be cautious."

4. HANDLE WITH STRUCTURAL REFRAME: "Here's the thing - almost every agency that burned a contractor did the same thing: they ran cold ads, generated a list of 'leads,' and shipped the list to 5-10 contractors in the same area. Every lead was being pitched by your competitors. You were buying a shared list, not a qualified prospect.

We don't do that. 30-mile exclusive radius. Qualification call BEFORE we hand you the lead. $150 only fires AFTER a qualified appointment is booked. The specific thing that burned you - we structurally can't do to you. Different model."

5. QUESTION-CLOSE: "With all of that in mind, what's the most intelligent decision from here?"

WHY IT WORKS: This is judo. Instead of defending, you ELEVATE them. They came in defensive and wary - they leave feeling respected AND like they're part of an elite 1-2-3%. That's a completely different buying state. Matt Ryder uses this exact move - it works because it's authentic, not manipulative.

WHAT NOT TO SAY:

PART 3: THE RULE OF 3

If you handle the same objection 3 times and they're still pushing back, STOP. You're in convince mode now, and it's lost.

Say: "You know what, it's been a pleasure speaking with you. I'm not going to push any more. If you have any questions, my number's saved as More Jobs - reach out anytime."

Push the sale away. If they pull it back, re-engage. If they don't, they were never going to close.

PART 4: OTHER GAPS WE NOTICED TODAY

Not the top priority (objections are), but fix over time:

1. YOU NEVER ASKED THE 20-MINUTE ASK (0 of 5 calls)

Every call ended with "send me info." Dead prospect in 48 hours. The 20-min ask is the only mechanism for catching same-call closes.

Rule: EVERY call, BEFORE you end it, ask the 20-minute ask. No exceptions.

2. YOU STACK PRICES

3. YOU DON'T SET THE FRAME (only 1 of 5 calls)

The frame gives YOU control. Script: "Here's how this goes - I'm going to ask you a few questions about the business. If it looks like a fit, we'll get something booked. You can expect leads as early as next day. This is pretty exclusive - only one contractor per 30-mile radius."

Do this on EVERY call.

4. YOU TALK MORE THAN YOUR PROSPECTS

Script s

Quick fix: after every question, count to 5 silently before saying anything else. Silence is pressure - they'll fill it.

5. USE THEIR OWN WORDS AGAINST LATER OBJECTIONS

Dropping a fee as the prospect is leaving is the #1 trust-killer in sales. ALL fees get front-loaded at the right time in pricing, never revealed at the end. You probably lost that deal with that sentence.

PART 6: YOUR WEEK 1 WORK PLAN

Day 1-2: Memorize the "BEEN BURNED" handle cold. 30-40 reps out loud. Record yourself, listen back. Goal: you can do the Matt Ryder reframe without looking.

Day 3-4: Memorize the RISK handle (close-rate math). Practice asking "what's your current close rate?" until it's natural.

Day 5-6: Use the frame + 20-min ask on EVERY call. No exceptions.

Day 7: Self-review your week's recordings against the rubric (sops/sdr-call-rubric.md in the vault). Be honest. Find your own mistakes.

TARGET FOR NEXT WEEK

1-2 closes out of 5. That's all we're asking.

Memorize 2 objection handles + use the frame + ask the 20-minute ask, and you WILL close deals. The prospects are there. The script works. Execute it.

You've got this.
